Autoplay videos Stephanie Bose It is a beautiful and comfortable way to show and share your passions, to share with people who live in the same country or in other parts of the world and to show to people who need a reminder of where you come from. We can see interesting things for free, we are getting inspired by other people's dreams. We often think that there is not so much to see in the USA, when it comes to extreme sports. There are a lot of possibilities, if you go to the right places and look at the right time. In the USA there are many people who follow extreme sports. Who make it happen for everyone to see. People like the extreme skiers Shaun White or skydiver Felix Baumgartner. While these people are making extreme sports happen, there are many others who are trying to make extreme sports happen in their part of the world. We all know the role of Mario Muller in this game. He is not only an extreme skier, but also a special coach for training new skiers. At the same time, other people are making extreme stuff happen. There is a program called Red Bull TV. They are not only making extreme sports, but also normal extreme sports. The people who run this program are doing great work for making extreme sports possible. I was in the USA with my friend Mario Muller to do a workshop. We made a kind of guide for beginners. And when we started, we both said that we were going to do things that we never did before. The goal was to go really high. Mario was going to jump higher than we did ever before. And I was going to try something that I never thought of before. We both thought that we were going to fail. When we started our journey we both felt nervous. We had no idea what we were going to do. This is when we decided that we are not going to fail. We are going to make sure that no one is able to catch us. Even if we had to try harder and harder. This is how we became the first to jump from the
